Seymour's declination, and accepts the nomination with grateful appreciation of the honor conferred. He enlogizes Governor Tilden and warmly indorses his administration of State affairs, and expresses the belief that, by following his policy, in due time, by patience and perseverance, the resumption of specie payments will take place, not by act of Congress but in obedience to the laws of trade.

He discusses upon the political situation, and says no hopes of reform can be expected from the party now in power.
On the subject of canal tolls he believes the canals should pay their running expenses, but he never expected they would be a source of revenue to the State. By carrying out the reform inasgurated by Tillen he believes canal tolls may be still further reduced. He
